Excerpt from Ontario Educational Association Jubilee Banquet, Convocation Hall, University of Toronto, April 18, 1911: Souvenir Volume The banquet was held in the large Examination Hall of the University of Toronto and was attended by about five hundred persons. This attendance was made up in the main of members of the Association, but there were present also many representative citizens outside of the teaching profession. The Executive Committee for the present year, in compliance with a suggestion of their predecessors, undertook the preparation of a volume which should preserve in permanent form the Speeches delivered at the banquet and which would be for the teachers of the Province, and for others as well, a souvenir of an interesting event in the history of the Ontario Educational Association. The Printing Committee, upon whom has devolved the actual work of preparing this volume, desire to express their appreciation of the kindness of those friends who have lent photographs of certain of the past presidents of the Association for the purpose of illustrating the work. They wish also to record their gratitude to the Minister and the Deputy Minister of Education for the cordial sympathy which they have shown with the efforts of the committee and for the very material assistance which they have rendered. The study of human body measurements on a comparative basis is known as anthropometrics. Its applicability to the design process is seen in the physical fit, or interface, between the human body and the various components of interior space. Human Dimension and Interior Space is the first major anthropometrically based reference book of design standards for use by all those involved with the physical planning and detailing of interiors, including interior designers, architects, furniture designers, builders, industrial designers, and students of design. The use of anthropometric data, although no substitute for good design or sound professional judgment should be viewed as one of the many tools required in the design process. This comprehensive overview of anthropometrics consists of three parts. The first part deals with the theory and application of anthropometrics and includes a special section dealing with physically disabled and elderly people. It provides the designer with the fundamentals of anthropometrics and a basic understanding of how interior design standards are established. The second part contains easy-to-read, illustrated anthropometric tables, which provide the most current data available on human body size, organized by age and percentile groupings. Also included is data relative to the range of joint motion and body sizes of children. The third part contains hundreds of dimensioned drawings, illustrating in plan and section the proper anthropometrically based relationship between user and space. The types of spaces range from residential and commercial to recreational and institutional, and all dimensions include metric conversions. In the Epilogue, the authors challenge the interior design profession, the building industry, and the furniture manufacturer to seriously explore the problem of adjustability in design. They expose the fallacy of designing to accommodate the so-called average man, who, in fact, does not exist. Using government data, including studies prepared by Dr. Howard Stoudt, Dr. Albert Damon, and Dr. Ross McFarland, formerly of the Harvard School of Public Health, and Jean Roberts of the U.S. Public Health Service, Panero and Zelnik have devised a system of interior design reference standards, easily understood through a series of charts and situation drawings. With Human Dimension and Interior Space, these standards are now accessible to all designers of interior environments.

Text for hotel personnel dealing with sales of meetings and conventions to be held at hotels and the servicing of the event India Rubber World and Electrical Trades Review Watson-Guption Catering: A Guide to Managing a Successful Business Operation, Second Edition provides the reader with the tools to fully understand the challenges and benefits of running a successful catering business. Catering was written as an easy-to-follow guide using a simple step-by-step format and provides comprehensive coverage of all types of catering. This is a significant contrast to other texts which are geared to a specific segment of catering such as on-premise, off-premise, or corporate dining. The graduate who decides to enter into catering will be charged with providing the "restaurant" experience to their clients and optimizing profits for their employer. Catering will assist them in achieving these goals.
